NSW SCIENTIFIC COMMITTEE

Final Determination

The Scientific Committee, established by the Threatened Species Conservation Act, 1995, has made a Final Determination to list Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar Penplain, Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South Slopes bioregions as an ENDANGERED ECOLOGICAL COMMUNITY on Part 2 of Schedule 1 of the Act. The listing of Endangered Ecological Communities is provided in Part 2 of the Act.

The Scientific Committee has found that:

1. Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar Penplain, Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioregion is an ecological community that is scattered across the eastern alluvial plains of the Murray-Darling river system. Typically, the ecological community occurs on red-brown earths and heavy textured grey and brown alluvial soils in the climatic belt receiving between 375 and 500 mm mean annual rainfall. The structure of the community varies from low woodland and low open woodland to low woodland or open shrubland, depending on site quality and disturbance history. The tree layer grows up to a height of about 10 metres and invariably includes Acacia (Weeping Myall or Boree) as one of the dominant species or the only tree species. The understorey includes an open layer of chenopod shrubs and other woody plants and an open to continuous groundcover of grasses and herbs. The structural composition of the community varies, particularly with latitude, as chenopod shrubs are more prominent south of the Lachlan River district, while other woody species and summer grasses are more common further north. In some areas the shrub strata have been reduced or eliminated by clearing or heavy grazing.

The community is characterised by the following assemblage of species:

2. The total flora list for the community is considerably larger than that given above. Many species are present in only one or two sites or in low abundance. The composition of the site will be influenced by the size of the site, recent rainfall or soil conditions and by its disturbance (including fire, grazing, flooding and land use history). The number and relative abundance of species will change with time since flooding or significant rainfall, and may also change in response to changes in rainfall regimes. At any one time, above-ground individuals of some species may be abundant, but the species may be represented below ground in the soil seed banks or as dormant structures such as bulbs, corms, rhizomes, rootstocks or lignotubers. The list of species given above is of vascular plant species, the community also includes micro-organisms, fungi, cryptogamic plants and a diverse fauna, both vertebrate and invertebrate components of the community are poorly documented.
3. Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar Plains, Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioregions are known from parts of the Local Government Areas of Berrigan, Bland, Bogan, Cobar, Conargo, Coolamon, Coonamble, Corowa, Forbes, Gilgandra, Griffith, Gwydir, Jerildere, Lachlan, Leeton, Lockhart, Moree Plains, Murray, Murrumbidgee, Narranderra, Narromine, Parkes, Urana, Wagga Wagga and Warren, and but may also occur elsewhere in these bioregions. Bioregions are defined in Thackway and Creswell (1982).

4. Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar Peneplain, Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioregions. This community is an open to sparse tree canopy up to 10 metres tall dominated by Acacia pendula (Boree), which may occur in pure stands, particularly south of the mid-Lachlan district, or in combination with other trees such as Casuarina cristata, homalophylla (Yarran), A. oswaldii (Miljee), Alectryon oleifolius (Rosewood), Apophyllum anomalum (Warrior bush) and Capparis spp. The mistletoe, quandang, is common on the branches of Acacia pendula throughout. The shrub layer varies substantially with latitude and grazing history (Beadle 1948), and may be absent in some stands. Atriplex nummularia (Old man saltbush) was historically one of the dominant understorey shrubs in the south, but is now uncommon in the community (Moore 1953). Other chenopod shrubs, such as Atriplex semibaccata (Creeping saltbush), Enchylaena tomentosa (Ruby saltbush), Maireana aphylla (Cotton bush), M. acuta (Black cotton bush), M. excavata, M. pentagona (Hairy bluebush), Rhagodia spinescens (Thorny saltbush) and Sclerolaena muricata (Black rolypoly), are among the most frequent shrubs in the understorey of Myall Woodland south of the mid Lachlan. Further north, non-chenopod shrubs, such as Eremophila maculata (Spotted bluebush), Apophyllum anomalum (Warrior bush) and Atalaya hemiglauca (Whitewood) are more prominent components of the community, although some chenopods may still be common. The ground layer includes a diversity of grasses and forbs, and varies depending on grazing regime and occurrence of recent rain. Chloris truncata (Common grass), Einadia nutans (Climbing saltbush), Enteropogon acicularis (Curly grass), Rhodanthe corymbiflora (Small white sunray), Solanum esuriale (Queensland blueberry), Sporobolus caroli (Fairy grass), are frequent throughout the range of the community. Astrebla spp. (Mitchell grasses), Austrostipa aristiglumis (Plains grass), Dichrochloa sericeum (Queensland bluegrass) and Panicum decompositum (Native millet) frequently occur in Myall Woodland north from the mid-Lachlan River district. Austrodanthonia spp. (White-top or Wallaby grasses), Austrostipa scabra (Speargrass), and herbs such as Chrysocephalum apiculatum (Common everlasting), Goodenia pusilliflora, Myriocephalus rhizocephalus (Woolly-heads) and Swainsona spp. (Bladder peas), are more prominent in the south.
5. A number of vegetation surveys and mapping studies have been conducted across a range of Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar Peneplain, Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioregions. In western New South Wales, the community includes the 'Acacia Associates' of Beadle (1948). On the Moree floodplain, the community includes the 'Myall/Rosewood Woodlands on Elevated Floodplain' of White (2000) and the 'Myall woodlands' of DLWC (2002a). In the Lachlan-Macquarie district of central New South Wales, the community includes the 'Acacia pendula-Atriplex nummularia Alliance' of Biddiscombe (1963), Map unit R5 'Myall Woodlands' of Sivertsen and Metcalfe and Metcalfe et al. (2003), Floristic Groups '65 Eremophila mitchellii/Acacia oswaldii', '66 Outlier Acacia homalophylla', '67 Sclerolaena muricata/Acacia oswaldii', and '68 Acacia pendula' of Austin et al. (2000), Map units ALP3 'Acacia woodlands of the stagnant alluvial plains: Acacia pendula' and ALP4 'Acacia woodlands of the alluvial plains: Acacia homalophylla' of DLWC (2002b), and Broad Vegetation Group 'Myall open-woodland on loamy-clay plains' of Kerr et al. (2003). In the Riverina region, the community includes the 'Acacia pendula-Atriplex nummularia alliance' of 'Boree woodland' of Miles (2001), Map unit 12 'Acacia pendula with an he understorey' of DLWC (2002c) and 'Parna Plains Grassland and Woodland' of al. (2002). Myall Woodland belongs to the 'Riverine Plain Woodlands' vegetation Keith (2004).

6. Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar P Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioreg been substantially reduced and modified by clearing and grazing over the past 100 years. The extent of Myall Woodland has not been mapped across its entire range. In the Riverine Plain Woodlands (which include Myall Woodland), are currently estimated to cover 1000-2000 km², representing less than 30% of the original extent of this defined vegetation class (Keith 2004). Compared to this combined estimate the remaining area of Myall Woodland is likely to be smaller and is likely to represent less than 30% of its original range. In the Moree district, White (2001) estimate 1000 km² of Myall/Rosewood Woodlands on Elevated Floodplain remained, representing 10% of its estimated pre-clearing distribution. In the lower Macquarie-Castlereagh region, Kerr et al. (2003) estimated that 93% of Myall open woodland had been cleared, leaving less than 300 km² extant. In the Riverina, NSW NPWS (2003) estimated that 780 km² of Myall Woodland had been cleared, leaving approximately 780 km². In the Murray region which partly overlaps the Riverina region, Miles (2001) estimated that 190 km² of Myall Woodland remained, representing only 4% of the pre-clearing distribution.
7. In many areas of the Riverina, Myall Woodland has been eliminated and replaced by grassland of Chloris, Austrodanthonia and Austrostipa, that lacks the woody component of the original woodland vegetation (Beadle 1948, Moore 1953, Porteners 1993 et al. 1997, Keith 2004). In some areas, Acacia pendula persists as small, scattered individuals suppressed by grazing. Moore (1953) had considerable difficulty in locating any stands that had not been considerably modified by grazing or clearing. He has established the formerly extensive distribution of Myall Woodland in the Riverina from accounts in historical journals and land surveys. Beadle (1948) and Moore (1953) interviewed local farmers who described a major decline in dominant woody vegetation particularly Acacia pendula and Atriplex nummularia, during droughts of the late nineteenth century when trees were cut for emergency fodder and there was severe overgrazing by sheep and rabbits. There was also a substantial trade in Myall woodlands (Williams 1962). High levels of grazing also led to the replacement of tall tussock grasses with short perennial grasses and unpalatable annual herbs (Beadle 1948) as well as introduction of exotic herbs and grasses such as Bromus spp., Erodium spp., Lepidium africanum, Medicago spp., Sisymbrium spp. and Trifolium spp. In some areas, shrubs, notably Lycium ferocissimum (African boxthorn) have also invaded some areas occupied by the community. Extant remnants of Myall Woodland are therefore in various states of modification that reflect their history of tree removal and grazing.
8. Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar P Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioreg continues to be threatened by clearing and fragmentation associated with clearing and overgrazing by feral and domestic animals, pest outbreaks and weed invasion. In the northern Wheatbelt, for example, the remaining area of Myall Woodland decreased by 10% between 1985 and 2000 and more than 90% of the remaining area was in

9. The dominant species in Myall Woodland, Acacia pendula, is subject to herbivore processionary caterpillar Ochrogaster lunifer (Bag-shelter moth) (NSW Agriculture 1960). These caterpillars may cause complete defoliation of the tree (Cunningham et al. (1981) state that “the severity of defoliation varies from year to year as does the tree’s reaction. Those stripped of their leaves take a considerable time to recover and in some instances at least, death of the tree occurs as a direct result of caterpillar attacks.” The impacts of O. lunifer are a particular concern to landholders in the Riverina districts where remnants of Myall Woodland have survived past clearing pressure where stocking rates are maintained at low levels with the aim of conserving the natural community.
10. Only a small area of Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar Penepain, Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioregions is represented within existing conservation reserves. In the Riverina district, Oolambeyan National Park contains approximately 700 hectares in varying stages of recovery, and a further 10 hectares are found in Lake Urana Nature Reserve. In the Riverina district, less than 5 ha of Myall Woodland is represented in Murrumbidgee Marshes Nature Reserve.
11. In view of the above the Scientific Committee is of the opinion that Myall Woodland in the Darling Riverine Plains, Brigalow Belt South, Cobar Penepain, Murray-Darling Depression, Riverina and NSW South western Slopes bioregions is likely to become extinct in nature in New South Wales unless the circumstances and factors threatening its survival or evolutionary development cease to operate.

Final Determination

The Scientific Committee, established by the Threatened Species Conservation Act, 1995, has made a Final Determination to list Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp in the Sydney Basin Bioregion as an ENDANGERED ECOLOGICAL COMMUNITY in Part 3 of Schedule 1 of the Act. A Listing of endangered ecological communities is provided for by Part 2 of the Act.

The Scientific Committee has found that:

1. Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp in the Sydney Basin Bioregion is the name given to an ecological community dominated by shrubs and sedges that occurs on sites with drainage in low slope headwater valleys on the Newnes Plateau in the upper Blue Mountains.
2. Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp is characterised by the following assemblage of species:

Baeckea linifolia	Baeckea utilis
Baloskion australe	Bauera rubioides
Blechnum nudum	Boronia deanei
Callistemon citrinus	Callistemon linearis
Celmisia longifolia	Centella asiatica
Daviesia latifolia	Deyeuxia gunniana
Dillwynia stipulifera	Drosera spathulata
Eleocharis sphacelata	Empodisma minus
Epacris microphylla	Epacris paludosa
Gahnia sieberiana	Geranium neglectum
Gleichenia dicarpa	Gonocarpus micranthus
Goodenia bellidifolia	Grevillea acanthifolia subsp. acanthifolia
Gymnoschoenus sphaerocephalus	Hydrocotyle peduncularis
Juncus continuus	Lepidosperma limicola
Leptospermum continentale	Leptospermum grandifolium
Leptospermum myrtifolium	Leptospermum obovatum
Lepyrodia anarthria	Lepyrodia scariosa
Lomandra longifolia	Luzula ovata
Notochloe microdon	Olearia quercifolia

Todea barbara	Utricularia dichotoma
Velleia montana	Viola sieberiana
Xanthosia dissecta	Xyris gracilis
Xyris ustulata

3. The total species list of the community is considerably larger than that given above. Many species are present in only one or two sites or in low abundance. The composition of a site will be influenced by the size of the site, recent rainfall or one time, above ground individuals of some species may be absent, but the species represented below ground in the soil seed banks or as dormant structures such as corms, rhizomes, rootstocks or lignotubers. The list of species given above is of plant species; the community also includes micro-organisms, fungi, and a diverse fauna of both vertebrate and invertebrate. These components of the community are not fully documented.

4. Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp occurs in narrow, elongated swamps formed in the headwaters of the Newnes Plateau, in predominantly sandstone catchments of Narrabeen Group geology, at approximately 900-1200 m elevation on deep sandy sediments that are permanently to periodically waterlogged.
5. Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp is characteristically dominated by shrubs, with a cover of sedges. Shrubs have a dense to open cover, and include Baeckea, Grevillea acanthifolia subsp. acanthifolia, Epacris paludosa and Leptospermum. The cover of sedges varies inversely with shrub cover. Common sedges include B. australe, Empodisma minus, Lepyrodia scariosa and Lepidosperma limicola, which include Patersonia fragilis and Xanthosia dissecta. Gleichenia dicarpa, Gymnoschoenus sphaerocephalus may occur around drainage lines, while L. longifolia may be prominent around the swamp margins. Floristic composition varies locally in relation to soil moisture gradients within the swamps (Keith and Benson 1990).
6. With decreasing altitude, Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp grades into Blue Mountains sedge swamp communities (Keith and Benson 1988). The transition occurs around Clarence at approximately 850-950 m above sea level. Blue Mountains sedge swamps typically have less cover of shrubs and a greater cover of sedges (particularly Gymnoschoenus sphaerocephalus) than Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp. Other features that distinguish Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp from Blue Mountains sedge swamps include the presence of species in the former such as Dillwynia stipulata, Boronia deanei, the absence from the former of a range of shrub species that are rare at higher altitudes, and the occurrence of the former on subdued terrain, compared to the steep seepage slopes and headwater valleys that typify swamp habitats at higher elevations in the Blue Mountains.
7. Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp may share a number of characteristics with Peatlands and Swamps of the New England Tableland, NSW North Coast, Sydney South East Corner, South Eastern Highlands and Australian Alps bioregions, also an Endangered Ecological Community under the Threatened Species Conservation Act 1995 (1995). However, this latter community has a lower diversity of sclerophyllous species, a greater diversity of soft-leaved sedges, grasses and herbs, and typically occurs on more fertile substrates than Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp.
8. Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp provides habitat for threatened species including Boronia deanei, Petalura gigantea, the Giant Dragonfly, and Eulamprus leuraensis, the Mountains Water Skink. The endangered shrub, Persoonia hindii, is also associated with the margins of the swamps.

elsewhere in the Bioregion. Vegetation mapping of the entire range of Newnes Shrub Swamp indicates that it covers less than 650 ha in total (Keith and Benson and Keith 1990). The largest swamp covers about 40 ha, and the average size is less than 6 ha. Approximately 160 ha of Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp within Blue Mountains and Wollemi national parks, with the remainder on state freehold land. Approximately 120 ha of the community, including the largest swamp adjacent to pine plantations or other cleared land.

10. Biogeographically, Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp is related to other upland swamps in the Sydney Basin (e.g. Keith and Myerscough 1993). It represents the highest expression of upland swamps on sandstone in mainland Australia, and is transitional between the 'Coastal Heath Swamps' and 'Montane Bogs and Fens' vegetation communities (Keith 2004). All of these swamps play important hydrological roles, acting as water filters, releasing water slowly to downstream watercourses, thereby regulating water quality and stream flows (Young and Young 1988).
11. A number of the water catchments containing Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp include transport corridors, pine plantations, sand quarries, coal mines or small-scale agricultural holdings. In some cases, these developments are located immediately adjacent to the swamps or with narrow buffer strips. The community is threatened by such developments through clearing, fragmentation, erosion and sedimentation all associated with roadworks, quarrying and periodic timber harvesting from adjacent plantations. Clearing of native vegetation is listed as a Key Threatening Process under the Threatened Species Conservation Act (1995).
12. Changes to drainage and moisture conditions in some swamps, including the Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp, for example of the community, are caused by damming of swamp watercourses; across the swamps; sedimentation and erosion associated with roadways, quarrying and plantation harvesting within swamp catchments; and disposal of waste water from underground coal mines. These changes pose threats to the persistence and integrity of the Newnes Plateau Shrub Swamp, given the crucial roles of water regimes in determining the composition, structure and function of the community. Alteration to the natural regimes of rivers and streams and their floodplains and wetlands is listed as a Key Threatening Process under the Threatened Species Conservation Act (1995).
13. The Newnes plateau is underlain by extractable coal seams at varying depths. Longwall underground longwall mining occurring, or proposed to occur, beneath the major swamps. Subsidence of the land surface, and associated fracturing of bedrock between the coal seam and the surface, occurs after longwall mining, and this may change the hydrology of catchments and swamps they contain. Specifically, the conventional perched water table flows into subsurface flows through mine-related voids which significantly alter the water balance of upland swamps (Young and Wray 2000). Changes to surface morphology within or near the swamps as a result of mine subsidence create nick points which become the focus of severe and rapid erosion (Young and Wray 2000). These changes pose threats to the persistence and integrity of the community. A loss of habitat following subsidence due to longwall mining is listed as a Key Threatening Process under the Threatened Species Conservation Act (1995).

result in physical displacement of vegetation, increased influx of sediment nutrients or significant drying of the swamps.

15. In view of the above the Scientific Committee is of the opinion that Newnes Shrub Swamp in the Sydney Basin Bioregion is likely to become extinct in nature in South Wales unless the circumstances and factors threatening its survival cease to exist or it might already be extinct.
