MEDICAL BOARD OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA

PROFESSIONAL GUIDELINE: Advertising of medical services and products

Endorsed by the Medical Board of South Australia on 21 January 2010

Commencement date: 1 February 2010

Review date: February 2012

PROFESSIONAL GUIDELINE STATEMENT

Context:

The Board recognises that it is valuable to provide information to the public about medical practitioners and the services they provide. Information provided should be reliable and useful and help consumers to make an informed choice about services. Advertising can provide a means of conveying general information on the availability of services and procedures to consumers, helping them obtain a better understanding of services and options available and enabling them to make informed health care choices.

All advertisements for medical services must comply with the Trade Practices Act 1974. Medical practitioners should be familiar with the ACCC guideline 'Fair treatment? Guide to the Trade Practices Act for the advertising or promotion of medical and health services' published July 2000 which provides information to support successful implementation of this guideline.

Objectives:

This guideline aims to protect the public from advertising relating to medical services which is false, deceptive or misleading and provide guidance to medical practitioners about advertising of medical services, in order to promote the appropriate use of these services.

There are risks that advertising which is false, misleading or deceptive can lead to the provision of indiscriminate or unnecessary medical services, or create unrealistic expectations about the benefits, success and safety of such services, with adverse consequences for consumers. Indeed, there is potential for inaccurate or misleading advertising of health or medical services to cause great harm to consumers, both physically and psychologically. This is particularly relevant in cases in which the consumer may be vulnerable or not sufficiently well informed to make a decision about the use of certain services.

What is acceptable advertising?

Advertising used to inform the public of the availability of medical services will be considered acceptable to the Board if it is information published in the public interest, and is factual, honest, accurate, clear, verifiable and not misleading.

As such, advertising may contain:

- a. a factual and clear statement of the service(s) and/or any product(s) offered;
- b. contact details of the office of the medical practitioner, including e-mail or website addresses and telephone numbers;
- c. a statement of office hours regularly maintained by the medical practitioner and the availability of after hours services;
- d. non-enhanced photos or drawings of the medical practitioner or his/her office;
- e. advice on the availability of wheelchair access to any premises to which the advertisements relate;
- f. a statement of any language(s) other than English fluently spoken by the medical practitioner or another person in his/her office;
- g. a statement about fees charged, bulk billing arrangements or other insurance plan arrangements and instalment fee plans regularly accepted;
- h. a statement of the names of schools and training programs from which the medical practitioner has graduated and the qualifications received;
- i. reference to any medical specialties in which the medical practitioner is registered with the Board;
- j. a list of the medical practitioner's publications in peer-reviewed journals;
- k. a statement of the teaching positions currently or formerly held by the medical practitioner in Australian Medical Council (AMC) accredited institutions, together with relevant dates;
- l. a statement of the accreditation or certification of the medical practitioner with a public board or agency, including any affiliations with hospitals or clinics;
- m. any statement providing public health information encouraging preventative or corrective care; and
- n. any statement outlining availability of male/female medical practitioners.

Consequences of breaching the Guidelines

A breach of these Guidelines may also be considered evidence of unprofessional conduct or professional misconduct and may be investigated by the Board, either on its own motion or in response to a complaint or notification. When a medical practitioner is found by a professional standards panel of the Board or by the Medical Professional Conduct Tribunal to have engaged in unprofessional conduct and/or professional misconduct in relation to advertising of medical services, the determinations that may be made include:

- censure the practitioner
- impose conditions on the registration of the practitioner

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • impose a fine on the practitioner • suspend or cancel the practitioner's registration. • disqualify the practitioner's registration • prohibit the practitioner from carrying on business as a medical services provider • prohibit the practitioner from occupying a position of authority in a corporate or trustee medical services provider. Breach of consumer legislation independent of these Guidelines will be dealt with by relevant agencies.
Definitions and Acronyms:	Advertising includes, but is not limited to, any public communication using any form of media in the public domain, motion picture, book, list, display, the internet or directory, and includes business cards, announcement cards, office signs, letterhead, telephone directory listings, professional lists, professional directory listings and similar professional notices. Advertising also includes situations where medical practitioners make themselves available for, or provide information to, media reports, magazine articles or 'advertorials'. In such circumstances, medical practitioners are required to authorise all content contained within such articles and are responsible for all published material. The Board may view failure to control content as constituting unprofessional conduct.
Professional Guideline Provisions:	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Medical practitioners are responsible for style, content and likely inference of all advertised material associated with their medical services. Medical practitioners must not delegate responsibility for accuracy or compliance with these guidelines to any non-medical staff members. 2. Medical practitioners should observe their professional ethical obligations when advertising medical services. They should consider the vulnerability of some consumers and how advertising of medical services may impact on consumers. This ethical responsibility includes ensuring that any advertising does not, advertently or inadvertently, encourage the provision of unnecessary or excessive medical services or attempt to coerce or put pressure on consumers to agree to such services or in any other way attempt to exploit consumers' vulnerability. The Board views these matters seriously and may initiate investigations into a practitioners' professional conduct in response to a notification, or on its own motion. Practitioners are referred to the AMA publication Code of Ethics—2004. Editorially Revised 2006 (available on Australian Medical Association website www.ama.com.au) and the Board publication Code of Professional Conduct: Good Medical Practice (available on Medical Board of South Australia website www.medicalboardsa.asn.au) and any national code of professional conduct for further explanation about their professional responsibilities in these areas.

3. Medical practitioners must clearly state their medical qualifications and expertise in the area of service they are advertising. Any person with a doctorate in another discipline and who offers medical services must clearly state in any advertising material that he/she is not a registered medical practitioner in South Australia. A medical practitioner who does not hold specialist registration must not claim or hold him – or herself out to be a specialist, either explicitly or by implication, or attempt to convey that perception to the public. When advertising a medical service a registered medical practitioner should ensure that he or she is competent by reason of his or her education, training and/or experience to perform the medical service advertised or to act in the manner or professional capacity advertised. Advertising qualifications or memberships may be useful in providing the public with information about experience and expertise, but may be misleading or deceptive if consumers can readily interpret the advertisements to imply that the practitioner is more skilled, or has greater experience than is the case.
4. Medical practitioners must be certain that they can substantiate any claims made in advertising material, particularly in relation to outcomes of treatment, whether implied or explicitly stated. Unless there is accepted scientific evidence that there are no risks at all, an advertisement for medical services should alert the public to the fact that there are health risks associated with the treatment.
5. Language used in advertising of medical services should not encourage inappropriate, indiscriminate, unnecessary or excessive use of medical services. In determining whether an advertisement is misleading, or whether it creates an unreasonable expectation of beneficial treatment, or directly or indirectly encourages the indiscriminate or unnecessary use of medical services or medicines, the Board will consider the overall impression of the advertisement and the likely impact the advertisement may have on all members of the public. Specifically, the Board will consider what conclusions a member of the public can reasonably infer from material contained within an advertisement and whether the material is likely to mislead or deceive either directly or by omission. Qualifiers or disclaimers should be displayed obviously, rather than contained in fine print.

6. Medical practitioners should not use comparative advertising that claims superiority over other practitioners. Medical practitioners should use comparative advertising responsibly. Since it is difficult to include all required information to avoid a false or inaccurate comparison being made, comparing one medical service with another risks misleading the public. Practitioners should avoid making unsubstantiated claims. They should not deride or otherwise criticise the services offered by another practitioner or make sensational statements which cannot be corroborated.

7. Medical practitioners should use any graphic or visual representations in medical or surgical advertising with caution. This includes photographs of patients or models, diagrams, cartoons or other images. If photographs of people are used in advertising the photographs must only depict patients who have actually undergone the advertised treatment and who have provided consent for publication of the photograph. The Board considers that the use of 'before and after' photographs has significant potential to be misleading or deceptive, to convey to a member of the public inappropriately high expectations of a successful outcome and to encourage the unnecessary use of medical services. If before and after photographs are used, care must be taken to ensure the public can trust the truthfulness of the images.

For example by:

- providing images that are as similar as possible in content, camera angle, background, framing and exposure;
- ensuring consistency in clothing and make up ;
- ensuring consistency in lighting and contrast ;
- acknowledging whether photographs have been altered in any way and
- acknowledging that the procedure being referred to is the only change that has occurred for the person being photographed.

8. Where a surgical (or an invasive) procedure is advertised directly to the public, thus bypassing the usual gate-keeping and referral role of the general practitioner, the advertisement should include a clearly visible warning, with text along the following lines: Any surgical or invasive procedure carries risks. Before proceeding, you should seek a second medical opinion. The text must not be in small print or an obscure position in the advertisement.

9. Information in medical advertising about the price of procedures must be clear and not misleading.

The Board considers that it is generally difficult to provide an accurate price of a medical service in an advertisement due to the personal nature of medical services and the number of variables involved in the treatment of each patient. The Board considers that medical practitioners should be very careful when including price information in medical advertising due to the significant potential for such information to mislead or encourage the unnecessary use of medical services.

10. If fees and price information are to be advertised, then prices for products and price information should be exact, with all fees for services, prices for products and price information clearly identifiable and any conditions or other variables to an advertised price or fee disclosed. Prices for advertised products should include fees for related professional services and other applicable price information unless the advertisement clearly states otherwise. The Board advises against using phrases like 'as low as' or 'lowest prices' or similar words or phrases when advertising fees for services, prices for products or price information. The Board also advises against quoting an instalment amount without stating the total cost. Discounts and offers of gifts with treatments must also be avoided.

11. Medical practitioners should not endorse products or services in advertisements for health related services such as nursing homes, hospitals, pharmacies, complementary health products or brands of medical equipment. However, when a medical practitioner chooses to endorse a health related product or service, the following apply:

- An endorsement should be based on an objective assessment of available scientific data supporting the use of the product or services;
- When an advertisement contains or implies an endorsement by bodies or associations that: represent the interests of consumers, conduct or fund research into a disease, condition, disorder or syndrome, or represent healthcare professions then: the body or association should be named and the endorsement should be authenticated and formally authorised by the body or association;
- the nature and limits of the endorsement should clearly be specified; and

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • when the body or association has received payment or valuable consideration for the endorsement, the advertisement must acknowledge that consideration or payment. 12. If a medical practitioner chooses to use scientific information in advertising, the information should be accurate, balanced, identify the relevant research, use terminology that is clearly understood by consumers, clearly identify the relevant researchers, sponsors and the academic publication in which the results appear, and be from a reputable and verifiable source. 13. Medical practitioners must not put pressure on consumers to use their services, for example by creating ill founded fear for their future health or by visiting or telephoning prospective patients.

No. 2 of 2010

DETERMINATION AND REPORT OF THE REMUNERATION TRIBUNALALTERNATIVE VEHICLE REQUEST—MAGISTRATE IULIANO

1. The Remuneration Tribunal has received a request from Magistrate T. Iuliano to obtain a Holden Captiva 7 LX from Fleet SA, which is not in the schedule of vehicles in current Conveyance Allowance Determination No. 6 of 2009 for Judicial Officers. The request is due to his family circumstances as none of the vehicles listed provide enough seating capacity to accommodate his family responsibilities.
2. The Tribunal has dealt with similar requests in the past.
3. The current determination relating to Conveyance Allowances (Determination No. 6 of 2009) states:
 ‘an alternative vehicle may be supplied where required because of a Judge’s, Court Officer’s or Statutory Officer’s disability. The annual charge for the use of the vehicle will be calculated on the same basis as the calculation made by Fleet SA for annual charges for use of motor vehicles by Executives.’
4. The Remuneration Tribunal has considered Magistrate T. Iuliano’s request. Having regard to similar circumstances dealt with in the past, the Tribunal has no objection to the proposal. However, as the requested vehicle model is not in the schedule of vehicles in the current Conveyance Allowance Determination of the Tribunal, the Tribunal makes this specific determination to allow Magistrate T. Iuliano to be supplied with a Holden Captiva 7 LX.
5. Magistrate T. Iuliano will be required to pay any difference between the amount determined from time to time by Fleet SA as the annual charge payable by Executives for a Holden Commodore VE Omega Sedan, less the sum of $758 and the amount determined from time to time by Fleet SA as the annual charge payable for a Holden Captiva 7 LX, less the sum of $758.
6. All other conditions of the current Conveyance Allowance (Determination No. 6 of 2009) as amended from time to time continue to apply.

DATE OF OPERATION

This determination will come into operation as from 23 April 2010.

Dated 23 April 2010.
