Communications and Media at UTAS this Spring

Media Training

Communicate more effectively through the media.

Learn to formulate and communicate ideas in and through the media, including media releases, op-eds and social media, and respond confidently to media questions.

The unit, offered by one of Australia's leading journalism programs*, will be taught through a combination of intensive face-to-face sessions (in Hobart) and online learning activities. Students will work with UTAS staff and industry experts.

In the unit, you will:

- Improve your understanding of the news media and the Tasmanian media environment.
- Develop skills for interviews and media writing.
- Analyse how the media chooses and reports stories.

Dates: 19 October to 31 December 2013

Apply for the Bachelor of General Studies and study Media Training (HEJ103) in Spring School at UTAS.

Communication and Professional Writing

Hone your writing, presentation and media awareness skills.

Expert communication skills are essential in the information age. This new, innovative, mainly online course hones students' writing, presentation and media awareness skills to make them confident and competent communicators in professional contexts. The unit guides students through the contemporary digital landscape and offers the expertise needed to create a range of communications products[^]. Participants will learn to pitch and write for print and electronic media, craft corporate and not-for-profit messages, gain an insight into visual communication, and use social media platforms as promotional tools. You will learn to communicate complex ideas, numbers and academic research to lay audiences, and to present your ideas professionally.

Dates: 18 November 2013 to 31 January 2014

Apply for the Bachelor Arts or Bachelor of General Studies and study Communication and Professional Writing (HEJ107) in Spring School at UTAS.
