Judicial Remuneration Tribunal Act 1995JUDICIAL REMUNERATION TRIBUNAL

Report No. 1 2002

PREAMBLE

Since the Judicial Remuneration Tribunal's previous report of 17 January 2001, the Judicial Remuneration Tribunal Act 1995 (the Act) has been amended to provide that the Tribunal make determinations in relation to salaries and allowances of holders of judicial offices, subject to disallowance by either House of Parliament, in lieu of its previous function of recommending to the Attorney-General whether adjustments to the salaries and allowances were desirable.

In addition, the Tribunal is now empowered to make recommendations to the Attorney-General in relation to specific conditions of service of judicial officers.

The Tribunal is required to report on a determination or recommendation at intervals of not less than one year and not more than two years. A report of a determination or recommendation by the Tribunal is required to be published in the Government Gazette within twenty one days of receipt by the Attorney-General.

As preliminary issues prior to consideration of current submissions on behalf of the Judges of the Supreme and County Courts and the Magistrates, the Tribunal sought advice on:

- (a) the time limitations on reporting as prescribed in section 13(1) of the Act;
- (b) its ability to make separate reports on:
 - (i) a determination or recommendation;
 - (ii) a determination or recommendation on each tier of the judiciary;
- (c) its ability to make determinations with retrospective effect from a date prior to the appointment of the new Tribunal with determinative powers.

The Victorian Government Solicitor advised his views that:

- (a) section 13(1) restricted the Tribunal to delivering only one report within a twelve month period. However, this limitation applies to the subject matter only of the particular report. A report on salaries for Judges of the Supreme Court would exclude a further report on salaries for those Judges within the twelve month period but would not exclude a separate report on salaries for Judges of the County Court or Magistrates within that period.
Similarly, the making of a report relating to a determination on salaries would not exclude a separate report relating to recommendations on conditions of service within the same twelve month period.
- (b) while noting that the Act is silent on the backdating of determinations, retrospectivity is permissible from the beginning date of the amending legislation, which gave the determinative powers to the Tribunal, that is, 1 January 2002.

The terms of appointment of the members of the Tribunal operating previously under the Act expired in February 2001.

There have been no adjustments to the salaries and allowances of judicial officers since those recommended in the 17 January 2001 report, with operative effect from 1 January 2001. Having regard to the time limitations under section 13(1) of the Act, the Victorian Government Solicitor has confirmed that the Tribunal is required to make a report on or before 17 January 2003.

SUBMISSIONS

Submissions were received from the Judges and Masters of the Supreme Court, Judges of the County Court, Magistrates, and the Victorian Government. Below is a brief summary of each submission and the Tribunal's response to issues raised.

Submission from the Judges and Masters of the Supreme Court

The submission from the Judges and Masters of the Supreme Court sought an increase in salary of 7.08%, effective from 1 January 2002, to bring Victorian judicial salaries in line with other Australian jurisdictions. The submission argued that the salaries of Victorian Judges were generally below those of their counterparts in other Australian jurisdictions. This was due in part to the fact that other jurisdictions enjoyed a largely annual review of salary, whereas a period in excess of eighteen months had lapsed since the last review of judicial remuneration in Victoria.

A retrospective increase from 1 January 2002 was sought on the basis that the long delay in addressing judicial salaries was not occasioned by any action or inaction of the judicial officers. The quantum of increase sought was based on calculations by Mercer Human Resource Consulting, taking into account:

- (a) the increased salaries for Judges of the Federal Court from 1 October 2001;
- (b) the three month period between 1 October 2001 and 1 January 2002 (the claimed operating date);
- (c) “the diminution in the value of money between 1 January 2002 and 30 September 2002.”

The emphasis in the submission was on immediate salary ‘catch up’ with other jurisdictions, while noting the need to address other issues at a later date.

Submission from the Judges of the County Court

This submission was essentially consistent with that of the Judges and Masters of the Supreme Court and also requested a 7.08% from 1 January 2002. The County Court submission further noted that such an increase would still place their salaries below those considered adequate, particularly given jurisdictional enhancements and increases in efficiency of operation of the County Court. The submission noted that the issue of relativities between the courts would be addressed at a later date.

Submission of The Chief Magistrate, Deputy Chief Magistrates, Magistrates, Coroners and Acting Magistrates

The submission from the Magistrates also sought a 7.08% increase from 1 January 2002.

In addition, the submission requested a review of the salary relativity between Magistrates and County Court Judges and consideration of certain non-salary aspects of remuneration.

In subsequent discussion, because of timing constraints, it was agreed that current consideration be given to the ‘catch up’ salary claim.

Submission by the Victorian Government

The Government submitted that an increase of up to 4% in judicial salaries would be appropriate to allow for the increases that have occurred in other Australian jurisdictions since the previous review of judicial remuneration in Victoria.¹

The submission further argued that in accord with Government policy, public sector wages ought not to be adjusted retrospectively unless in exceptional circumstances.

It submitted that the increase of up to 4% should be effective only from the date of the Tribunal’s determination. The submission also supported a further prospective salary adjustment (“not exceeding the imminent adjustments in federal and New South Wales judicial salaries and allowances...”) also to operate from the date of the Tribunal’s determinations until its next review of judicial salaries.

Because of insufficient opportunity to consider them, the Government submission supported deferral of consideration of those aspects of the submission of Magistrates relating to non-salary remuneration.

METHOD OF INQUIRY

Section 12 of the Act governs the method of inquiry to be employed by the Tribunal when performing its functions. Apart from the requirement to address key considerations outlined in s.12 (1A) of the Act, the Tribunal is free to determine its own process.

Representatives of the Judges and Magistrates were invited to meet with the Tribunal in informal sessions, to raise any matters relevant to their written submissions. The Tribunal found this to be beneficial and proposes to follow this course in the future.

1 Federal Court: 4% from 1 October 2001; NSW Supreme Court: 3.7% from 1 October 2001

Copies of the submissions of the Judges and Magistrates were provided to the Government for comment.

On this occasion, the Tribunal did not regard it as necessary to seek the views of the other parties on the response of the Government.

Apart from examination of the written submissions, the Tribunal researched judicial remuneration in other Australian jurisdictions and consulted relevant tribunals.

FACTORS FOR CONSIDERATION

Pursuant to section 12 (1A) of the Act, in making a determination, recommendation or giving an advisory opinion (section 11A), the Tribunal must consider the following:

- (a) the importance of the judicial function to the community;
- (b) the need to maintain the judiciary's standing in the community;
- (c) the need to attract and retain suitably qualified candidates to judicial office;
- (d) movements in judicial remuneration levels in other Australian jurisdictions;
- (e) movements in the following indicators –
 - (i) the Consumer Price Index
 - (ii) average weekly ordinary time earnings (AWOTE)
 - (iii) executive salaries, including those of executives within the meaning of the Public Sector Management and Employment Act 1998 in the Victorian Public Service;
- (f) improvements in operational efficiency;
- (g) work value changes;
- (h) factors relevant to Victoria, including–
 - (i) current public sector wages policy;
 - (ii) Victoria's economic circumstances;
 - (iii) capacity of the State to meet a proposed increase in judicial salaries, allowances or conditions of service;
 - (iv) any other relevant local factors;
- (i) relativities between Victorian courts and tribunals

In their submissions, the Judges, Magistrates and Government addressed these factors in greater or less degree. On the basis of those submissions, the Tribunal has taken these factors into account in reaching its decision. It accepts that, from time to time, particular factors will require special consideration, depending upon the bases of claims and the nature of submissions made. While, on this occasion in determining what is essentially a catch up claim, the Tribunal sees little benefit in detailing aspects taken into consideration under the heading of each factor, it has given attention to:

- (a) movements in wages and prices indicators as highlighted in all the submissions.
- (b) factors relevant to Victoria as contained in this Government submission, with particular reference to the economic circumstances

The Tribunal accepts the arguments in both the Judicial and Government submissions that the CPI increased by approximately 2.8% in the last financial year, wages increased by about 5.5% and executive salaries in the public sector increased by approximately 10% in 2001.

Nothing has been raised with the Tribunal that would suggest that the State lacks the capacity to meet the level of salary increase under consideration by the Tribunal.

THE TRIBUNAL'S CONSIDERATION

Since the previous review of judicial salaries in January 2001, there have been significant movements in wages and salaries generally, in particular, there have been considerable increases in judicial remuneration in other jurisdictions. While the Tribunal in January 2001 was recommending increases designed in part to take account of earlier judicial salary increases accorded in other jurisdictions, those jurisdictions were currently considering or had accorded further increases. As noted in the Government submission the relevant Federal and New South Wales tribunals are presently reviewing judicial remuneration. Any salary increases accorded in those two jurisdictions are expected to operate from 1 October 2002; New South Wales by legislation and the Commonwealth by practice.

The Tribunal considers that it is appropriate in its first determination under the new determinative powers to seek to address this lag in salary justice. The Government has recognised this need by supporting a prospective salary component, which should not exceed “the imminent adjustments in federal and New South Wales salaries...” (as already noted, expected to operate with effect from 1 October 2002), while not supporting backdating of the salary catch up.

The Government support for a catch up measure of up to 4% is designed to place the Victorian Supreme Court Judge in the same salary relativity to a High Court Judge (83.6%) as existing at 1 January 2001.

In the past, in the interests of avoiding or reducing salary lag or ‘leap-frogging’, there has been general agreement between governments that the salary of a Supreme Court Judge should not exceed 85% of that of a High Court Judge.

While the Tribunal has not accepted that the measure of salary increase accorded should take account of the three month period (1 October 2000 to January 2001) during which the increases in federal and Victorian judicial salaries were not ‘synchronised’ and “the diminution in the value of money between 1 January 2002 and 30 September 2002” as advanced by Mercer Human Resource Consulting on behalf of the Judges of the Supreme Court, it does consider that a catch up salary increase of 5%, which would raise the relativity of the Supreme Court Judge closer to 85% of the salary of a High Court Judge, is appropriate in light of matters raised.

The Tribunal has noted that under Victorian Government Public Sector Wages Policy retrospectivity in salary and wage adjustments is not supported, other than in exceptional cases. The Judges and Magistrates have pointed out that the long delay in reviewing their salaries has not resulted from matters within their control.

The Tribunal is strongly of the view that exceptional circumstances exist in the current case. It therefore determines a general catch up salary increase of 5% for Judges and Magistrates with retrospective effect from 1 January 2002.

Taking account of the expected movement in judicial remuneration federally and in New South Wales, the Tribunal determines a further 3% increase for Judges and Magistrates, with operative effect from 29 October 2002, with such increase to be taken into consideration in the next review of judicial remuneration.

SECTION 13(1)

As previously mentioned, this sub-section requires the Tribunal to report at intervals of not less than one year and not more than two years. The effect of this, advised by the Victorian Government Solicitor, is that the Tribunal will not be able to report on salaries for Judges and Magistrates for a further twelve months. This restriction does not assist in avoiding salary lag and raises the continuing need to address salary catch up. This restriction is drawn to the attention of the Attorney-General for consideration.
