EXEMPTION

Application No. A459/2003

The Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal has considered an application, pursuant to Section 83 of the Equal Opportunity Act 1995, by The Richmond Fellowship of Victoria. The application for exemption is to enable the applicant (a company limited by guarantee) to advertise for and employ two male workers to provide services to a male client of the Applicant's McPherson Community Program.

Upon reading the material submitted in support of the application the Tribunal is satisfied that it is appropriate to grant an exemption from Sections 13, 100 and 195 of the Act to enable the applicant to advertise for and employ two male workers to provide services to a male client of the Applicant's McPherson Community Program.

In granting this exemption the Tribunal noted:

- The Richmond Fellowship of Victoria is an organisation which provides services to people with psychiatric and intellectual disabilities. Many of its programs are funded by the Department of Human Services.
- The McPherson Community Residential and Rehabilitation Program of the Applicant provides support to people with these disabilities in the Western Metropolitan Region.
- The services are aimed at helping these people to live more independently in an environment of their choice.
- Men with psychiatric and intellectual disabilities often experience acute loneliness, isolation and depression, and these experiences are often worsened by societal expectations concerning male behaviour. These men often find it difficult to relate to women and often exhibit challenging behaviours such as sexually inappropriate behaviour and verbal or physical aggression. There is a need for these men to experience a positive male role model to improve their ability to engage in appropriate relationships and behaviours.
- One of the male clients of the Program needs substantial support to be able to live off site, to assist him with personal hygiene and daily living activities, and to support him in other activities such as leisure and recreation and searching for a job. He has recently moved out of the Program's residential facility.
- The workers who support this client's needs need to be male because this client has a history of inappropriate behaviour to females, because this client sometimes exhibits intimidating or threatening behaviour or inappropriate hostility to others, and because this client needs support with hygiene and other personal care issues. Male workers will ensure his privacy and comfort in these respects and will help him to develop appropriate relationships and behaviour and will assist him in developing healthy relationships with the wider community.

The Tribunal hereby grants an exemption to the applicant from the operation of Sections 13, 100 and 195 of the Equal Opportunity Act 1995 to enable the applicant to advertise for and employ two male workers to provide services to a male client of the Applicant's McPherson Community Program.

This exemption is to remain in force from the day on which notice of the exemption is published in the Government Gazette until 14 January 2007.

Dated 9 January 2004.

EXEMPTION

Application No. A1/2004

The Victorian Civil and Administrative Tribunal has considered an application pursuant to Section 83 of the Equal Opportunity Act 1995 by VICTEC Limited. The application for exemption is to enable the applicant to advertise for and recruit women only to a pre-vocational training and employment placement program in relation to the information technology sector and, in particular, that part of the sector concerned with network administration or Internet infrastructure.

Upon reading the material submitted in support of the application the Tribunal is satisfied that it is appropriate to grant an exemption from Sections 13, 35, 37, 42, 100 and 195 of the Act to enable the applicant to advertise for and recruit women only to a pre-vocational training and employment placement program in relation to the information technology sector and, in particular, that part of the sector concerned with network administration or Internet infrastructure.

In granting this exemption the Tribunal noted:

- On 12 December 2000 the Applicant (under its former name Victec Group Training Ltd) was granted an exemption by this Tribunal to conduct this program. That exemption expired on 11 December 2003.

- After the previous exemption was granted, the Applicant first conducted a workshop to determine how its program might be structured so as to be attractive to women. It identified as factors which make the information communication technology ('ICT') industry less attractive to women as including the perception that the work is boring and contains too much jargon.
- It then conducted a series of group and individual selection interviews. It did not select candidates for the program by means of aptitude testing.
- There was a strong response from women to this approach. There were 200 applications of which 20 were selected to participate in the program. The candidates represented a diverse range of ages and educational backgrounds.
- The pre-vocational course was structured to include a variety of teaching methods including practical training and talks by external speakers. The course was customised for individual participants. The program also included 18 months of job placement in the industry, coupled with mentoring assistance. The certificates issued at the completion of the course and placement qualify the holder to work in the ICT industry.
- Of the 20 participants in the program 19 have been placed in ongoing employment.
- There has been positive feedback concerning the program from trainees, employers with whom trainees were placed and a wide variety of industry and other bodies including agencies who have equal employment opportunity responsibilities.
- The ICT industry still has a significant under representation of women.
- According to Victorian Government statistics as at June 2003 24% of the ICT workforce were women. There are still small numbers of women who undertake new apprenticeships in the ICT industry.
- Given the demand for this program, its success to date and the continuing under representation of women in the ICT industry the Applicant wishes to be able to continue to run this program.

The Tribunal hereby grants an exemption to the applicant from the operation of Sections 13, 35, 37, 42, 100 and 195 of the Equal Opportunity Act 1995 to enable the applicant to advertise for and recruit women only to a pre-vocational training and employment placement program in relation to the information technology sector and, in particular, that part of the sector concerned with network administration or Internet infrastructure.

This exemption is to remain in force from the day on which notice of the exemption is published in the Government Gazette until 14 January 2007.

Dated 12 January 2004.

- 4.6 A harbour master has, in relation to the port waters for which he or she is the harbour master, such functions as are conferred on a harbour master by the PS Act.
- 4.7 The functions of a harbour master may be limited by a condition imposed by the Director of Marine Safety on his or her licence.
- 4.8 A harbour master's licence may contain a condition that makes the exercise of his or her functions subject to any directions given from time to time to the harbour master by the Director of Marine Safety.
- 4.9 Subject to any directions given by the channel operator by which he or she is engaged, a harbour master may authorise a person approved by the channel operator to exercise, in relation to the port waters for which he or she is the harbour master, the harbour master's functions under the PS Act. An authorisation may be general or may apply only to the exercise of such functions as are specified in the instrument of authorisation.

- 6.4 If there is a dispute between the parties as to the terms or operation of this memorandum, each party will ensure that its contact officer endeavours in good faith to resolve that dispute with the other's contact officer. If, however, a contact officer gives notice to the other party's contact officer of the view that the dispute is unlikely to be resolved by discussions between the contact officers, then each party's contact officer must promptly:
